

Breathe, the geothermal therapy with Stones

Breathe is a collection of 3 sets of basalt stones to use in geothermal therapy massages. The geothermal therapy with hot stones is a technique used for an integral massage that contributes to balance energy, release tension, relax muscles and reduce stress.

The dark stones are made of basalt. A material that comes from the very heart of the earth whose property is to retain warmth in a natural and innate way. The same material possesses a quiet energy that contributes to stimulate the circulation and to increase the cellular metabolism. In addition, its perfect 140-hour polishing gives them a pleasant touch and it is ideal to be in contact with the skin.

The chakra stones are the colourful stones and, according to the Hindu tradition, represent the 7 centres of the metaphysics and biophysics energy from the human body. They are nowadays related to our endocrine system and some of their components are proved to contribute to eliminate the negative energy and other metaphysical and physical impurities that remain in the human body.

The white marble stones are conceived for cold treatments, as they do not retain the human body warmth. These stones reduce swellings and their soft touch is very pleasant.

HOW TO HEAT THE STONES

The safest way to heat stones is to use a professional massage stone heater.

Our stone heaters are equipped with a removable tank where you can place clean towels and arrange the hot stones. The tank is filled with water while covering the stones. Then the lid should be closed in way to reach the right temperature in the shortest possible time. Temperature can be adjusted thanks to the front screen and once the stones have been used, they can be introduced again inside to make them reach the desired temperature.
